WEARING EVENING CLOTHES.

A Chicago View of the Question From a Masculine Viewpoint.

Citizens of the older towns where it is customary for men of any social pretensions whatsoever to wear formal evening clothes after 6 in the afternoon often reproach Chicagoans for not following this time honored custom. They are never satisfied with the explanations given, because these explanations are rather evasions and do not explain anything.

As a matter of fact, although nearly every Chicago man knows why his "full dress" accumulates dust and sustains moths in the dim recesses of the closet, he does not realize that his reasons are the reasons that consign the glad garments of his fellow men to a similar desuetude. It may be just as well to get together and confess.

If one could make a formal evening dress map of Chicago one could show several small, well defined areas in and about the city where the open faced waistcoat and spiketail coat are necessary, or at least permitted. In the loop, about theaters and fashionable hotels, such garments are worn with out misgivings, and in certain narrowly prescribed residential districts one may flit from house to house in the raiment of joy without danger. But if one essays to go from one of these haunts of fashion to the other, except in a taxi, one is likely to run a gamut of ribald comment that will leave him a nervous wreck when he reaches his destination.

Our Chicago democracy is very young, newly come into a knowledge of its privileges and enthusiastically hostile toward anything that remotely resembles an assumption of class or caste; hence through the vast tracts it inhabits and that separate the dress suit areas one from another the man who essays a pilgrimage openly in the despoiled garments of idleness invites reprisals.

If the fashionable men of Chicago who wish to maintain the fashionable tradition, yet cannot afford taxicabs, will get together they may develop enough strength to persuade the traction companies to supply for their evening travel sufficient closed and armored cars, running at appropriate intervals. Otherwise they must take their chances, as other adventurous Americans do.—Chicago News.

An Extremist.

"What in the world does old Kloseman want with more money? He hasn't any near relatives, and he doesn't begin to spend his income now."

"That's just the point. He wants to economize on a larger scale."—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Newed—Will you have a piece of this angel cake, darling? Newed (cautiously)—Well, dear, you—er—know I don't care much for cake. Did you make it? Mrs. Newed—No; mamma sent it over. Newed—Give me two pieces, please.—Indianapolis Star.

A Reminder.

"The old fashioned boy used to mind every word his father said." "Yes," replied the somewhat cynical youth, "but you must remember that the old fashioned boy had one of those thoughtful old fashioned fathers."—Washington Star.

Those are our friends who reprimand us, not those who flatter us.—Pythagoras.

One of London's Seven Curses.

There are in London thousands of poor folks whose principal meals come from the fried fish shop which, because of its evil smell, has been described as "one of the seven curses of London." Yet to a hungry man the smell of fried fish is a most enticing odor. George Glasling has described how maddening it was to him in his darkest days "to smell the fish he had no money to purchase," and how, when affluent to the extent of a few coppers, he "eagerly bought and devoured the crisp golden colored slices of fresh cooked fish—surely the food of the gods."—London Chronicle.
